

Disclaimer

Bladder Cancer WebCafe is provided as an information service only. Information contained herein does not constitute medical advice and is in no way warranted by the provider to be complete or accurate. The provider of this page is not a medical professional and can make no judgment about and is not responsible for the accuracy and/or completeness of the information contained herein. All medical information should be discussed with your physician. Users of this website agree to hold the provider harmless for any liability for any claims and expenses relating to or resulting from use of this site.

Privacy statement

WebCafe visitors may be assured that although statistics about total site and page usage are compiled, no private user information is recorded. WebCafe does use cookies (small bits of information accessible to the programs used by the site and stored on the users hard drive) for certain security purposes, to record user patterns and to track pages accessed by visitors to the site, but no personal information can be deduced from that.

If you send email to the webmaster requesting some action on our part, we ask that you explicitly include your email address in the body of your email. Your email address will not be captured or used for any other purpose than answering your explicit question or responding to your explicit comment.

List Privacy

For those who subscribe to the discussion group; posting to the group indicates a willingness to be contacted by other members. No user information of any kind, including e-mail addresses, will be released to any third party. Use of the list to obtain user e-mail addresses for the purpose of solicitation is expressly forbidden and may constitute a violation of applicable laws. List members who feel their e-mail address posted have been used in violation of the above policy are urged to contact the list administrators

For more, please refer to our page on Listinfo for more info.

None of the information shared via the email list is intended to provide medical advice, but only to share private experiences with the various procedures and treatments from the perspective of the patient, as well as information our members have found helpful in understanding their own treatment and support options. If you are in need of medical advice you should contact qualified practitioners in your local area.

Contributer's Privacy

For original materials on our web site, it is the choice of the author whether to be personally identified. Some authors have chosen to share some parts of their medical history in an effort to help educate other people faced with similar medical situations. If you wish to attempt to communicate directly with the author of any particular web page, send an email to the webmaster if the author has not included his or her email address.