

Welcome to Bladder Cancer WebCafé

Bladder cancer treatment information, support and resources

Any cancer diagnosis creates a critical crossroad in life.

The goal of this bladder cancer specific website is to help you find answers, relieve some of the fear, reinforce hope and to help you or your loved one find the best path on a difficult journey.

Please note: this site is no longer actively maintained. We keep it open because of the invaluable user contributions that we have collected over the years. Please be aware that the information you find here might be outdated.

I personally recommend this website to all my patients with bladder cancer.

Endorsements and recognition for WebCafé.

What's inside?

- Treatment options, latest research and resources for non-muscle invasive, muscle-invasive, upper tract and advanced bladder cancer.

- Facing surgery? Advice for neobladder, continent reservoirs and ostomy recipients in our extensive 'cystectomy' section.

- Patient created 'survival guides'.

- Members share their experiences through blogs. We were blogging before blogging was invented! This section was started back in 1999 as our Storyboard, and has now been converted to member blogs.

- Tales from the Trenches - Survivor stories; some happy, some less so, all real.

- Check out our survivor art gallery.

- Join our affiliated email discussion group, hosted by ACOR- May,2007: Research published, "How Cancer Survivors Provide Support on Cancer-Related Internet Mailing Lists": <http://www.jmir.org/2007/2/e12>

Check the site map for a quick overview of the WebCafe's contents

For help with abbreviations and a glossary of common terms, go here